COPER AND WORDSWORTH-

Years Before His Death. ins Cooper, the veteran chartist, received a grant of £200 from the st, had, on one occasion, a very eting interview with Wordsworth vdal Mount. Cooper had been at and started on a walk through e country.

as on the third day after leaving that Cooper arrived at Rydal He was very anxious to see worth and have a talk with him, ot knowing the poet and having roduction, was rather doubtful as at the nature of his reception might But, summoning all the courage at ommand, he boldly strode up to the door and knocked.

ly to an inquiry he was told that orth was at home; so he wrote slip of paper, "Thomas Cooper, of The Purgatory of Suicides," to pay his devout regards to worth." In a very few minutes in the presence of the "majestic h," and was bowing with deep rtfelt homage when Wordsworth is hand and welcomed him with hearty "How do you do? I am pp to see you," that Cooper says sood in his eyes for joy.

struck Cooper so much in worth's conversation as his reconcerning chartism-after the of Cooper's imprisonment had ched upon. "You were right," worth said; "I have always said ole were right in what they asked; went the wrong way to get it. nothing unreasonable in your It is the foolish attempt at force for which many of you n blamable," By and by the sation drifted to other subjects. was but one occasion, says on which I discerned the feeling ousy in him; it was when I men-Byron. A Broom Speculation. A 6-foot Yankee, seated upon a load of rooms, drove his team up before the loor of an establishment where he expected to find a purchaser. Jumping from his scat he entered the store and the following colloquy took place: Yankee-Can't I sell you a load of brooms today, mister?

Dealer-No; don't want any. Yankee-Better take 'em-sell 'em do

Dealer-Don't want 'em; got enough Yankee-I'll tell you what I'll do. If you'H take the lot I'll let 'em go for one dollar a dozen. You know they're wuth double that. The dealer stroked his chin for a moment, as if in deep thought, and then re-

"Well, I don't want any brooms, as I told you, but I don't mind making a trade with you." Yankee-What sort of a trade?

Dealer-Well, I'll take your whole load at one dollar a dozen and pay you one half cash, you to take the other half in Yankee-No you don't mister! You'll charge me such an all fired profit on the other half that I might come out at the little end of the horn. Dealer-Oh, no; I promise you that you shall have the goods just at what they cost me. Yankee-Wall, mister, that's what I call square dealin. It's a bargain.

And he commenced to unload the brooms in a pile on the sidewalk. When he got through he walked into the store. "There you are, mister; fourteen dozen, which I calcurlate makes just seven dollars comin to me."

Dealer-Yes. that's right; there's the money. Now what goods do you want for the other seven dollars? Yankee-Wall, I dunno. You see mister, I hain't much posted in your other truck, so I guess I'll take brooms -House Furnishing Review. Dairymen, stockmen, livery-stable men an orse-car men unite in saving that no such horse Unpleasantly Affectionate. An English traveler in Persia had ar rived at Abadeh, where a European telegraph official, Mr. G-, welcomed him hospitably and invited him to remain for the night. He says:

An hour later I was comfortably set tled upon the sofa when my rest was suddenly disturbed by a loud bang at the sitting room door, which, flying open, admitted two enormous animals which I at first took for dogs.

Both of them made at once for my ofa, and while the larger one curled comfortably around my feet and composed itself to sleep, the smaller one evidently of a more affectionate disposition, seated itself on the floor and comnenced licking my face and hands, an operation which, had I dared, I should trongly have resented.

But the white, gleaming teeth and cruel looking green eyes inspired me with respect, to use no stronger term; for I had by this time discovered that these domestic pets were panthers! To my great relief, Mr. G- entered at this juncture. "Making friends with the panthers, 1 see," he remarked pleasantly. "They are nice, companionable beasts." That may have been true at the time. The fact remains, however, that three months afterward the "affectionate one" half devoured a native child! The formed me, swarms with these animals

Pets of English Regiments. It may not be generally known that there is a special reason why the Royal Welsh Fusiliers should have a goat. They are a very ancient corps, and at an early period of their existence it was the custom to have a goat with a shield and garland on its horns to march at the head of the drums. Every 1st of March being the anniversary of their tutelary saint, David, the officers used to give an entertainment, and after the cloth was taken away a bumper was filled around to the Prince of Wales, and the goat, richly caparisoned for the occasion, was led thrice around the table in procession by the drum major. In 1884 the then regimental goat of the Welsh Fusiliers died and her majesty presented the regiment with two of the finest goats from a flock—the gift of the shah of Persia-in Windsor park, and since that date the queen has continued to supply the Welsh Fusiliers with goats as occasion required. The pet of the Second battalion Derbyshire regiment used to be a ram; that of the Eighth King's Royal Irish light dra goons, now hussars, a horse; the Royal Warwickshire had an antelope, the Rosshire Buffs a deer and the Fifteenth lancers a tiger.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A reported outbreak of Cholera, at Helnett, N. J., created much excitement in that vicinity. Investigation showed that the disease was not Cholera but a violent dysentery which is almost as severe and dangerous as Cholera. Mr. Walter Willard, a prominent merchant of Jamesburg two miles from Helmetta, says Chamberlian's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoa Remedy has given great satisfaction in the most severe cases of dysenterry. It is certainly one of the best things ever made." For sale by A. R. Fisher, Druggist,

The Transition of Electrical Theories. To the question, "What is electricity?" which is often asked, no absolute and satisfactory answer has yet been found. Notwithstanding the wonderful development of electrical applications, electricians are still feeling their way as to the nature and many of the principles of the operation of the mighty force that they are learning to control. This was suggestively shown by a remark made by the vice president of the American institute of electrical engineers at the annual convention of that body.

The speaker claimed that the present theories of electricity should be regarded merely as stepping stones to more comprehensive and satisfactory ones. He contended that modern theories of electrical phenomena, if adopted as an absolute framework of all our knowledge of these subjects, may, in a few years, become prison bars that will prevent the mind from making a free and unprejudiced investigation of new theories and new phenomena, and giving due weight and significance in the general science of electricity to the results obtained by the most recent experimenters .- St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Future of the Mississippi Valley. The delta of the Mississippi, below its unction with the Ohio, richer than the Nile or the Rhine, exceeds the combined area of Holland and Egypt, and is destined under the stimulus of free labor and the incentives of self government to build a fabric of society more opulent and enduring. Add to this the inexhaustible alluvion of the streams above. and the fertile prairies from which they descend, and the arithmetic of the past has no logarithms with which to compute the problems of the economic and commercial future of the west. It will be predominant in the development, not of this country alone, but of the hemisphere, and will give direction to the destinies of the human race.

We stand in the vestibule. We have not yet entered the temple.-John J. Ingalls in Lippincott's.

When, in 1883, Professor Freeman was examining Battle abbey, he found himself dogged by a person who, as he thought, somewhat officiously obtruded his offers of assistance. After vainly trying to shake him off, he broke forth with: "I don't want your assistance. The Duke of Cleveland promised that I should not be interfered with by the gardeners." "Exactly so," was the reply; "I hope they have obeyed my orders. I am the Duke of Cleveland."-San Francisco Argonaut.
